Over the next three hours, he rode through the city s streets, stopping to tour L Opera Paris. He rode down the Champs-Elysees toward the Trocadero and the Eiffel Tower, where he had his picture taken. After passing through the Arc de Triomphe, he toured the Pantheon and old medieval churches, though he did not manage to see the Louvre or the Palace of Justice. Heading back to the airport, he told his staff, It was the dream of my life to be permitted to see Paris. I cannot say how happy I am to have that dream fulfilled today. Four years after his tour, Adolf Hitler would order the city s garrison commander, General Dietrich von Choltitz, to destroy Paris, warning his subordinate that the city must not fall into the enemy s hand except lying in complete debris. The fact that Hitler set foot in Paris in June 1940 was remarkable in its own right and the culmination of Nazi Germany s lightning advance across most of Western Europe, beginning even before the war with the annexations of lands, some of which was made possible by the now widely reviled Munich agreement. Other negotiations with the Soviet Union allowed Germany to invade Poland with few consequences in September 1939, and the military superiority built up over the two decades between the world wars made it possible for the Germans...
