Arcadia Publishing, 2008. Book Condition: New. Brand New, Unread Copy in Perfect Condition. A+ Customer Service! Summary: Publication: The Daily Citizen Article Title: Students enjoy helping with pictorial history of Dalton Author: Jamie Jones Date: 11/6/08 Children often ride by the Blunt House and the Gen. Joseph E. Johnston statue in downtown on their way to eat dinner at the Dalton Depot. What they might not realize is the wealth of history behind the house, statue and train depot. A new pictorial history book of Dalton and north Georgia Dalton, published by Arcadia Publishing begins with the Cherokee Indians who first inhabited north Georgia and continues with the Hispanic population that has helped Dalton remain The Carpet Capital of the World. Tom Deaton, a retired history professor at Dalton State College, spearheaded the project. But third-through fifth-grade students at Dalton Public Schools C3 Center for gifted students housed at the International Academy at Blue Ridge School did much of the legwork by collecting many of the books photographs. Had we not put something together like this, they all may have been lost, Deaton said. A lot of the stories would have been lost along the way. The students may have even learned a few history lessons along the way. Ainsworth Emery Blunt, whose surname graces the home on Thornton Avenue, was Daltons first postmaster and mayor. The Gen. Joseph E. Johnston statue downtown that honors the Civil War general was erected and dedicated by the Bryan M. Thomas chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy in 1912. The cost? $6,000. Before serving steaks and hamburgers, the Dalton Depot building served as a train depot. Ten-year-old Jordon McKinney enjoyed the pictures of the old train depot. He even talked about the circle of nails in the wooden floor that...
